四、閱讀測驗:(共 10 題, 每題 2 分, 共 20 分)

A

Cotton candy is a large soft ball of sugar which has many thin lines. It is sold on a stick and eaten at fairs and parks. The color is usually white or pink.

Cotton candy is made with a special machine which was invented by two U.S. candy makers, William J. Morrison and John C. Wharton, in 1897. They first used the machine at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904. They called the candy "fairy floss." Now people in Australia still call it that way.

Cotton candy is popular among adults and children all over the world. Not only do people like eating cotton candy, but they also find it interesting to watch the candy being made.

I had a really bad day yesterday. First, I was woken up by a loud noise outside my window. It was really scary. I couldn't go back to sleep after that, so I got up and got ready for school. When I went to put on my uniform, I noticed it smelled because I forgot to wash it. I didn't have another one, so I was forced to wear it. Then when I got on the bus, all the seats were taken, so I had to stand all the way to school. Things just got worse there. I was made fun of because of my clothes, but I didn't feel it was a laughing matter. Also, I was made to sit away from the other students, and I wasn't picked for any teams. Lastly, before I was allowed to go home, I was told not to let it happen again. At that point, I realized it's really important to wear clean clothes.
